Steroids Used For This Skin Condition

Eczema is a broad medical term for inflamed skin that can appear red, blistering, oozing, scaly, brownish, or thickened and usually itches. Atopic dermatitis is the most common type of eczema. The skin is extremely sensitive to many things, and this type of eczema often runs in families.

Currently, there is no cure for eczema. In addition to avoidance of irritants, like creams, clothing, temperatures, and emotions, there are a large number of prescription products, including immunomodulators like tacrolimus (Protopic®), steroid creams and ointments, topical and oral antibiotics, and antihistamines used to manage this skin condition. Steroid creams and ointments are available both over-the-counter and with a prescription. Over-the-counter topical steroids include hydrocortisone in different strengths.

Prescription products, such as desonide (Desowen®), aclomethasone (Aclovate®), mometasone (Elocon®), and fluticasone (Cutivate®) are stronger and often work better. Using topical steroids for long periods can cause thinning of the skin, growth suppression in children, and stretch marks. Occasionally, oral steroids, such as prednisone are used for resistant cases. Due to all potential side effects, it is important to only take oral and topical steroids exactly as directed.

Piano prodigies

Five receive special awards at piano recital

Thirty-one students of the Shelly Davis Piano Studio of Whitehouse performed in their annual Spring Recital on May 7 at First Baptist Church in Whitehouse. Performances ranged from beginner pieces to advanced repertoire in a series of varied pieces.

Five students were awarded medals and trophies for musical excellence.

Receiving the Mozart Medal of Achievement were Kalle Walker (first grade), Andrew Martin (third grade), Hannah Mittica (fourth grade), and Keri Davis (fifth grade).

The Haydn Award of Excellence went to Kenai Walker (seventh grade).

To earn an award, students had to complete specific levels in their method books and theory assessments. They had to memorize technical skills and classical literature. They also had to complete a biographical report on a famous composer.
